CACTUS

Cactus (based on the game Tribe, designed by Naotaka Shimamoto and published by itten), is a dexterity friction balance game that has players competing for flowers in the desert by stacking strange colored shapes onto cactus! Cactus shares around half of the overlapping pieces with Tribe, with the major changes being a re-theme to the desert (my home territory!). The piece sizes have been reduced by around 50%, there's a new color scheme, and a lot of fun new shapes! The rules included are also slightly simpler than the original, and both versions can be played.

COLORFUL

Colorful (based on the game Match Me! by OHTANI Tadashi and published by Colon Arc), is a co-op game about categorizing and matching colors as a group. Each turn a player will be given a general topic, and must come up with a one word more specific example within that topic for the group to secretly match with a color card in their hand. After five rounds, cards are checked to see if the group was successful. After translating it into English I've also added a competitive mode, two-color mode, and a team version that gives unique insights into what our perception of color is as a species, and how it differs between individuals.
